

DIVERSE DONORS COME TOGETHER

Dear Friend,

On November 17, 2011, a group of philanthropists, representing a range of communities, backgrounds, and causes, came together in Beverly Hills.

Sponsored by the D5 Coalition, and in partnership with the organizations listed to the right, the event celebrated diverse donors, provided them with opportunities to network and learn, and aimed to inspire more giving to diverse communities.

We saw it as a call to action.

The following pages provide a recap of the event and related resources that diverse donors, and those who support them, might find of interest.

You can find more information about the D5 Coalition at www.d5coalition.org. We invite you to participate.

THE EVENT

“The convening opened up the idea of philanthropy as broader and more inclusive than what is often assumed by those within and outside the field.”

Kelly Brown, Director, D5 Coalition

“Philanthropy is alive and well in diverse communities around the globe. We need to celebrate and support this growing donor base and show how they’re redefining philanthropy using a lens of equity and inclusion. We don’t need to look far. There are stories all around us.”

Judy Belk, Rockefeller Philanthropy Advisors

MIDDLE: Judy Belk acknowledges three philanthropists featured in the video “I am a Philanthropist: Diverse Voices in Giving”: Virgil Roberts, Ana Valdez, and Carmen Castellano

BOTTOM: Melissa Bradley moderates a panel, “Giving at the Intersections of Movements and Communities,” that includes Carmen Castellano, William Choi, and Brickson Diamond (not pictured).

“Philanthropists include all types of people, not just the wealthy. All that is needed is willingness to give of our time, our resources, and our hearts. The D5 coalition promises to bring together like-minded and like-hearted philanthropists to pool resources that will impact services to those in need.”

Deborah Santana, Philanthropist

TOP: Alicia Lara moderates a panel, “Donor Reflections on Effective Philanthropy: What Did I Know and When Did I Know It?” that includes Edgar Arceneaux, Carrie Avery, and Beth Sawi.

MIDDLE: Roger Doughty addresses the group.

Millions Give Back

Contact: Shauné Zunzanyika, Program Officer
szunzanyika@womensfundingnetwork.org, (415) 441-0706

Description: The Millions Give Back (MGB) Campaign will propel the leadership and giving power of Black women, highlight the value of Black philanthropy, and mobilize millions from the Black community for social change grantmaking that benefits Black women and their communities.

Background: The Black Women Donors' Action Group (BWDAG) was formed in 2009 to challenge the paradigm presented by the classic philanthropic model centered on the giving of a small number of high net worth individuals. BWDAG's early convenings brought together more than 30 Black women leaders—representing women's funds, foundations, and individual philanthropists—who are committed to democratizing giving through a new strategy for community engagement. From these convenings and other conversations with steering committee leaders, a decision was made to brand this initiative as Millions Give Back (MGB), a campaign designed to expose the positive value and impact of Black giving, redefine engagement with other donor communities, and ensure Black women in philanthropy claim their space in the field. In partnership with the Women's Funding Network, and the Global Fund for Women, the MGB steering committee seeks to create and launch a successful multi-dimensional fundraising campaign.

Website: www.womendonors.org

Description: WDN is a community where progressive women multiply their energy, their strategic savvy and their philanthropic dollars to build a more just and fair world. WDN helps women invest their voices—and much more—in the demand for social and environmental change. By building powerful connections with one another and allies, WDN leverages more than $200 million a year towards solutions that address the root causes of injustice and inequality. Members collaborate and pool funding through member-led donor circles, regional events and trainings and network-wide strategic initiatives. WDN is the only national network for individual donors that is explicitly progressive and focused on building leadership of women, all the while bringing a race and gender lens to its work. WDN funds collectively in a way that is strategic, forward-looking and can quickly and nimbly respond to key opportunities.

Women's Foundation of California

Contact: Judy Patrick, President and CEO judyp@womensfoundca.org, (415) 837-1113, (415) 321-2048 direct

Website: www.womensfoundca.org

Description: The Women's Foundation of California is a publicly supported grantmaking foundation that invests in women as a key strategy for creating a California where all communities are economically secure and can thrive. To achieve this, the Women's Foundation connects a broad network of partners across California, including individuals and organizations, to resource bold community-led solutions and help move the best to scale, catalyze ideas by applying a gender analysis to complex issues, communicate complex issues in a way that builds public resolve to act, and influence and act on public policy with an expertise developed through cross-community and cross-sector collaboration. Created in 1979 to address the disparity in funding to women's and girls' issues, the Women's Foundation makes strategic grants to organizations run by and for women who have historically been underserved. We also fund organizations that, because of the issues they address or the communities they engage, have limited access to traditional funding sources. The Foundation has awarded $29 million in grants and capacity building assistance to over 1,200 community-based organizations in each region of the state.
